NEW FRIENDS, Nick Waites and Missy Kennedy spend time hanging out together.

Reflections

The year has begun! As we all head off to our fall classes, we begin to reflect on the previous years. Will this schedule be as tough as last fall? How soon will winter get here? Do I have enough time to wear all my summer outfits one last time, and when will winter leave? During our walk to class, we have also set some goals for the year. Some may choose a goal of a specific grade point average, some to just survive the year, others to graduate. Everyone has a reason for being at Northern, and reflecting on the past helps us set the goals for our future.

Reflections

Every morning we get up and take a look at ourselves in the mirror; some days we see a wonderfully talented individual, and other days we want to just crawl back into bed. Our reflections give us a representation of what others see in us and allow us to decide who we want to become. Our images are ever evolving, one day this zit will go away, and our presence here at Jorthern signals our desire to enhance our lives and make the reflection in the mirror a source of internal pride. The accomplishments, such as an honorary induction, gives us pride, while a failed test provokes the determination to succeed deep within each of us. There are no regrets because everything that has shaped the reflection looking back has made each of us a stronger person, and we've learned from the experience. Our reflection in the mirror is a passageway to reflect on what has made us who we are, and who we want to become.

Reflecting on CAMPUS

LIFE causes us to think about all those things that we do here when we're away from classes. It might involve relaxing with our friends, showcasing our talents, or being rewarded for our performance. Whatever it is, CAMPUS LIFE is what makes this university a close-knit community where friendships are formed that last a lifetime.

Summertime Fun

The unknown fourth quarter

Jenny Wakely

Have you ever wondered what campus is like after you pack your car and turn in your room key for the year?

Does everybody go home? Maybe the campus simply closes down. Hey, there's always a chance.

But not much of one. ONU is a bustling campus from Jan. 1 all the way through Dec. 31 and this year has been no exception.

June opened the season with the first session of summer courses. Students came for MedChem, Non-Western Music, Great Works and Practice Labs. July led into the second session and August even a third.

Yet students are not always on campus just to study.

Some made ONU their main source of summer income. Public Information, Alumni and Development, Marriott, McIntosh, King-Horn, the law library and Admissions a 111 employed student workers.

Now speaking of ONU admissions, the Bear Ambassadors bring a whole new side of campus to a roar. Heavy perspective student recruitment and new student orientations are the main focus for many faculty and staff during the summer. ONU Bear Ambassadors, Admissions Counselors and faculty members give tours, answer questions and eat cookies with several students a day. The Good News Bears help out with the new student orientations. They were seen working on orientation weekends and helping with the Info-Expo, a time when freshmen can learn about different organizations on campus.

And this is not all. There are always camps, camps and more camps. Volleyball, football, cheerleading, music and Methodist church camps are a few of the groups in and out of the residence halls. People from two months to 89 years lived in the different halls this summer.

Another aspect of summertime is the entertainment. This past summer, the Freed Center presented the performances Jesus Christ Superstar, Nunsense and Forever Plaid. The White Bear Inn hosted several free food nights. Students and faculty could come in and get free ice cream, pizza or chicken wings. King-Horn continued to have open hours and the bowling lanes and billiard room were also in operation.

So as you can tell, ONU is an active and lively place in the summertime as well as during the academic year.

SITTING IN THE SUN, Ryan Kruse and Steve Basinger show off their Phi Delta Chi composite.

FILING MORE PAPER WORK, Jennifer Smith works diligently in the Financial Aid Office.

Parents Weekend

Moms and dads invade Northern

Kate Klotzbach

The Ohio Northern University campus swarmed with moms and dads on the weekend of October 10th; it was Parents Weekend '97. The weekend was an opportunity for parents to visit their son or daughter, meet with professors and tour the campus. Parents were encouraged to bring the whole family for a weekend of autumn fun and time together.

Registration began at 4 p.m. on Friday and the weekend's events kicked off with a special dinner in Marriott. Later that evening, the ONU women's volleyball team squared off against Marietta in King Horn.

ATTENTIVELY LISTENING, Allison Yungbluth and her parents sit in on a parents' seminar.

Parents and students had the option of seeing the Freed Center production of "On Broadway...On the Road" or the ONU Symphonic Band.

Saturday was filled with many activities, such as Parents' seminars, open houses, tours and an art exhibit. The ONU staff participated in a faculty fair, varied receptions, assemblies and a luncheon. Then, to top the day, there was a men's soccer game, free bowling and billiards, a candle light dinner buffet and a comedian.

Some parents strayed from planned events on campus and ventured out with their son or daughter. Several Habitat for Humanity members brought their parents out to help with the construction on the latest H.E.L.P.S.

Homes project.

Many parents were simply amazed by the weekend. Both Judy and Bob Ertel, of Richfield, enjoyed the weekend with their son, Jason Ertel, a senior engineering major.

"This is a first for us," said Judy Ertel. "It's a marvelous opportunity for parents to see their kids, meet their friends and see their rooms."

Other parents visiting the campus agreed. Briefly on the scene were Wayne and Joyce Klotzbach, of Lakewood, visiting their daughter Kate Klotzbach, a junior communication arts student.

"It's great to see that ONU has so many opportunities for the students to get involved," said Wayne.

Sunday closed the weekend with a special worship service, along with other final events. The weekend was a success and parents had a lot of fun. Time to start planning for next year!

"It's a marvelous opportunity for parents to see their kids, meet their friends and see their rooms!"

READY TO THROW A STRIKE, a family waits their turn to bowl.

AT THE PARENTS' OPEN HOUSE, Stacy Geran introduces her parents to President Freed.

CHATTING IN THE GARDEN, Blake Cavinee talks with his wife, Jessica, and her parents at President and Mrs. Freed's garden party.

IN THE RESIDENCE HALL, Jennifer Smishko shows her family and exchange student Akane Hirakawa her home away from home.

H omecoming 1997

Feel the Magic

Daniel Lemkin

Floats, cow bells, glow sticks and bonfires. These things all conjure up images of school spirit, a common thread at Ohio Northern. The 1997 ONU Homecoming celebration was no different; the football game was one of the best attended, the bonfire was a complete success, and the remaining activities all represented the spirit that is incumbent at ONU.

The week started with dress-up days. On these days students dressed up in the specified clothing to that day. Each day that the students dressed up they registered to win a 25-inch television given away at the bonfire.

The weekend kicked off with the bonfire sponsored by Student Senate on Friday night. All fall sports teams were present, as well as the O N U marching band. An enthusiastic crowd cheered as each of the different teams took their turn in the limelight.

"An enthusiastic crowd cheered as each of the different teams took their turn in the limelight."

Battle of the Bands, which took place in the White Bear Inn. This event had the highest attendance ever with standing room only.

Saturday morning started early for those who had entered floats in the annual Homecoming parade.

The floats were judged and the parade took off at 10:00 a.m. At 1:30 p.m. the Homecoming football game with Muskingum College kicked off. ONU took the lead early and held on until the end. During halftime, Dan Bayliss and Tiffany Schmader, the 1996 King and Queen, crowned Korey Kidwell and Stephanie Shrider, the new Homecoming King and Queen. Kidwell represented Sigma Phi Epsilon and Shrider represented Maglott Hall.

The festivities came to an end with a performance of sixties entertainer Don McLean in the Freed Center. Everyone who attended these events had a great time and really got into the school spirit. Student Senate President Chris Dilday said, "This was one of the best Homecomings ever."

ALL RISE FOR THE HOMECOMING COURT, Saundra Hillman, Nicole Hudak, Jason Tucker, Danielle Yurkovich, Laura Wellman, Jason Latham, D.J. Colvin, Tiffany Schmader (1996), Korey Kidwell, Stephanie Shrider, Greg Myers, and Dan Bayliss (1996).

Registration

Something everyone has to do

Angie Perry

With her registration slip in her hand, Brandy Barber, junior accounting major, entered the line. She was anxious to see if she would be "closed out" of any classes. Finally, the registration secretary called her over. The seconds ticked by while the sluggish computer processed her registration information. At last, Brandy was registered for all of her classes.

Brandy's feelings about registration are similar to many other students.

Jennifer Smishko,

sophomore English and Spanish major, tells of her adventure, "My first year of registration was awful because I had to get into so many general classes. It took forever and I had to have so many alternate classes. But this year, I walked in and walked out in about five minutes."

The system has not always worked this way.

According to Naomi Theye, Associate Registrar, students registered alphabetically by class. Theye added that the system was changed because students complained that the system was unfair. The new system now runs by three criteria: the student's hours toward graduation, the student's current class schedule and then a random computer assigned number.

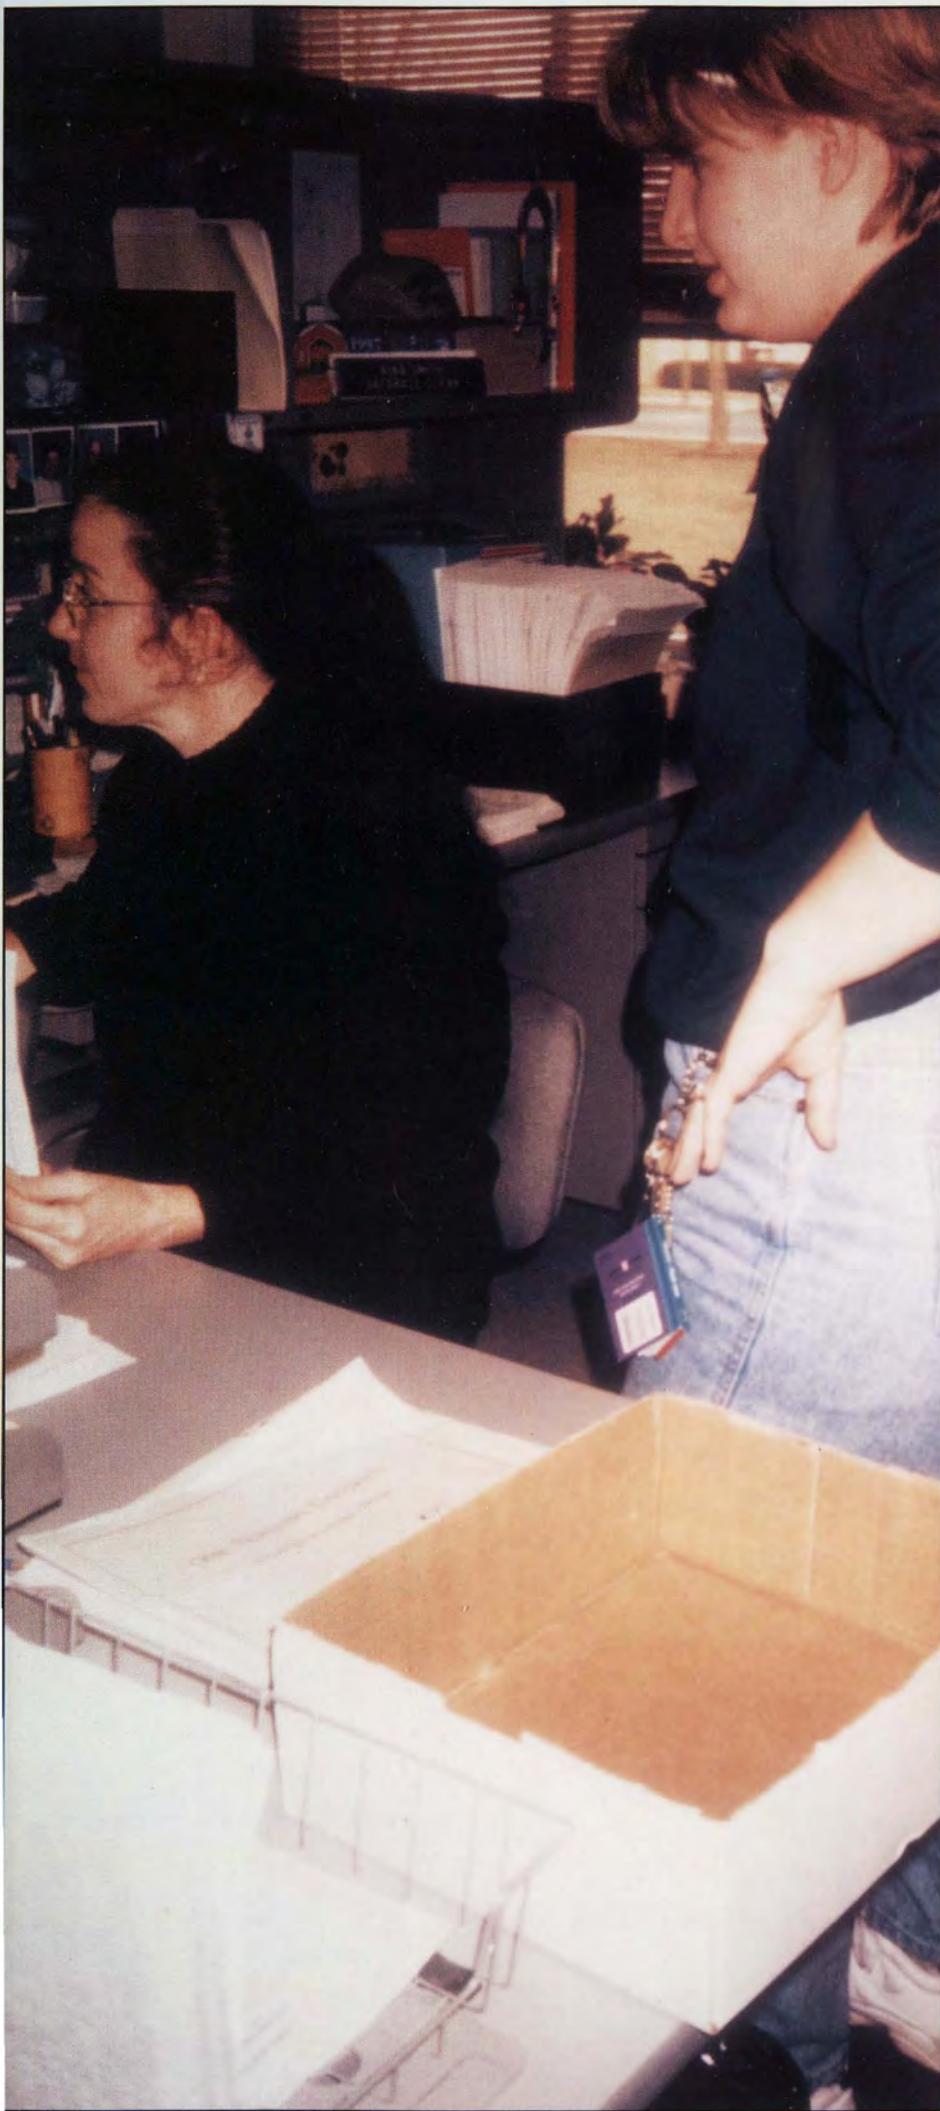

However, some students are still unhappy.

"Scheduling is a stressful time. I don't know of a good way to do it, but I definitely think they need to come up with a better way to help reduce stress," says third year pharmacy major Gail Stitt.

The Registrar's Office plans to keep this system for a while longer. So, in the mean time, keep this advice from senior Carrie Kashawlic in mind, "You just have to know what forms to have signed, and when in doubt get one of everything signed!"

ALWAYS ON THE MOVE, registration keeps everyone on their toes.

SMILING, Mindy Best is happy that she is done registering . . . at least for this quarter.

MAKING A WISH, Rachel Prinkey prays that all the classes she wants are still open.

QUICKLY SIGNING HER NAME, Katie Berlekamp tries to hurry the registration process.

R evealing the Senior Secret

What's in store for the graduates

Melinda Malone

Remember all those years ago when you came to Ohio Northern, a little nervous and more than a little excited to break away from the people you have probably known since first grade? You know, the same people who remembered that awful time in second grade when you threw up all over little Susie Spencer. The same people who saw you fall in love with your high school sweetheart and then watched as your true love found out Susie Spencer was single and left you crying at the prom. I know I was ecstatic to leave these people and their memory of my embarrassment behind me as I headed off to college. I was not only thrilled to leave them, but also so ready to leave my parents. Those were the reasons for coming to college. Now I struggle with the reasons to leave.

Does that sound funny? A senior on the verge of graduating cannot count on her fingers the reasons to escape this institution. Now you have heard it all. The term "senioritis" is often applied to people in their final year of school who are full of themselves and cocky in their authority over underclassmen. They wear their title of a senior like a badge, a proud honor that they have arrived this far. I see those people around campus and I am the envious one because I cannot put on a show quite as well as they can. I know a secret about the seniors graduating from Northern this year, and I want to share it with all of you. It is a confession of sorts and I will bravely put it on paper so no one else is forced to do so. You are welcome.

Seniors in college are terrified. They are not afraid like high school seniors. Remember, they crossed that bridge at least four years ago. Now, fears such as "will I find a job, where will I live, will my girlfriend/boyfriend come with me, can I get into graduate school, and what do I do now?" pass through their minds. For four years I have had friends around me every day: listening to my every complaint, holding my hair while I puke, receiving the box of chocolates when the cute guy in psychology started dating my sorority sister, and rationalizing my credit card bill when I splurged on my Elvis decanter in Memphis. What am I going to do without them beside me every step of the way?

Friends are only the beginning. What about the fabulous advisor who got me through four years of hellish classes and helped me reach the point I am at today? What about his wonderful advice or the few minutes he set aside for me so he could listen to me gripe and whine about my life in general? I feel nauseous at the thought of continuing without his encouragement and his faith in me for the rest of my life.

Childishly, I wish to hold on to these people as I have held onto them for the past four years.

So, now you know the deep dark secret we all possess. The fear we try to hide when showing a freshman where the art building is, or in the confident way we glide across campus. Don't get me wrong, there are moments of absolute thrill at being out in the real world. There is a certain roller coaster excitement about what is to transpire as soon as we toss our caps into the air with a mighty heave. But sadness comes too. So, when you see that senior sitting next to you in class, bragging about the end of his four years at the University, just nod your head and smile. He does not have to know that you know the secret.

"I know a secret about the seniors graduating this year, and I want to share it with all of you!"

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER, Megan Bush makes progress on her senior Capstone project.

FINISHING HIS GENERAL EDUCATION REQUIREMENTS, Steve Erlenbach checks his notes for Religion 107 before class.

PLAYING SOME TUNES, Steven Miller works as a D.J. at the Clark Hall Christmas party.

GETTING A DRY RUN, Erin Iesulauro participates in Mock Interview day.

Law Students Under construction

John Daly

If there is a theme for the activities of the law students over the past year it would be "Under Construction." The construction and renovation of Tilton Hall of Law turned normally rational law students into refugees in the town of Ada. The construction, which began in the early spring of 1997 will be completed by September of 1998, has brought new life to the College of Law.

CONSTRUCTING A HOUSE AND A FRIENDSHIP, John Daly and Laren Knoll peer out through a window.

This past academic year, the law students also reached out to the undergraduate population and surrounding communities in several activities, trying to rid themselves of the "lawbag" stereotype. Students from the law college and the undergraduate college built a house for Habitat for Humanity and also participated in athletic events sponsored by the athletic department and Student Bar Association.

"I think activities that promote students to mix have been beneficial," said Kathy Guernsey, an L1, "Relations are changing for the better."

Education Abroad

A small world after all

Laura Riethmiller

Halfway through my college career, I realized I needed to change my lifestyle. I was tired of cold winters, steak nights and residence hall fire drills. I wanted more than late night Meijer runs and 8 a.m. classes. So I hopped on a plane to a truly exotic location—Lampeter, Wales.

Why study overseas? It's a good question, and one that doesn't have just one answer. Maybe you want to live in a place where sheep outnumber people and where everyone speaks English but you can't understand what anyone's talking about. Maybe you want a room without a phone or a TV for your very own. Maybe you want a new wool sweater.

I wasn't looking for glamour or excitement. But, living in Wales is different from living in the United States. Everything from local slang to current events needs to be explained to foreign students like me.

Wales is on the other side of the Atlantic, not on the other side of the universe. Student life and academics are surprisingly similar to life at Ohio Northern. Living in

Lloyd Hall reminds me of living in Maglott Hall as a freshman. The women on my floor are very friendly, and we all like to hangout and talk. Most students complain about having early classes (9 a.m.) and having loads of lectures (eight hours a week). The professors are nice and willing to help their students.

Studying abroad is like going away to college for the first time. Everything is strange and scary. But the people you met yesterday are your best friends today, and campus feels like home. You live, you learn and you even find time to go to lectures.

Laura Riethmiller studied at the University of Wales Lampeter during the fall.

Off-Campus Living

Life after the residence halls

Mandy Knell

Imagine living in a spacious apartment with enormous picture windows and a glorious view of the city. Yes, my apartment overlooking Main Street, Ada, is a true college pad. I have placed candles all over the front room, two luxurious Goodwill couches in front of my huge console television and a trendy lava lamp on top of the end table. These articles symbolize my youth, my flair for decorating and my freedom from residence life.

There was a time when I too lived on campus. I once had to follow visitation. I once ate nothing but Lender's Bagels three times a day in Marriott's dining service. I once had to share a room, and take my roommate's feelings into consideration before spreading my junk over the entire room. But at the beginning of my senior year, my life in the residence halls came to an end. Now, my large, curfew-free apartment can hold as many boyfriends as I please. I now eat bagels out of choice rather than desperation. I may enjoy the filth of my OWN room and never think twice about the feelings of a roommate. And I could have a party if I wanted!

Sure, off-campus life is not all that I dreamt it would be. My weekend fun generally consists of a cheap video from Photo Pro, since all my money goes to bills.

Those beautiful picture windows are not as glorious in the winter when I receive a thank-you card from the Columbia Gas Company.

powdered sugar was not an adequate substitute for flour when making chocolate chip cookies. Yes, there are days when I long to be back in my comfy room in Brookhart Hall. I miss knowing that someone will be in the bunk above me to talk me to sleep at night.

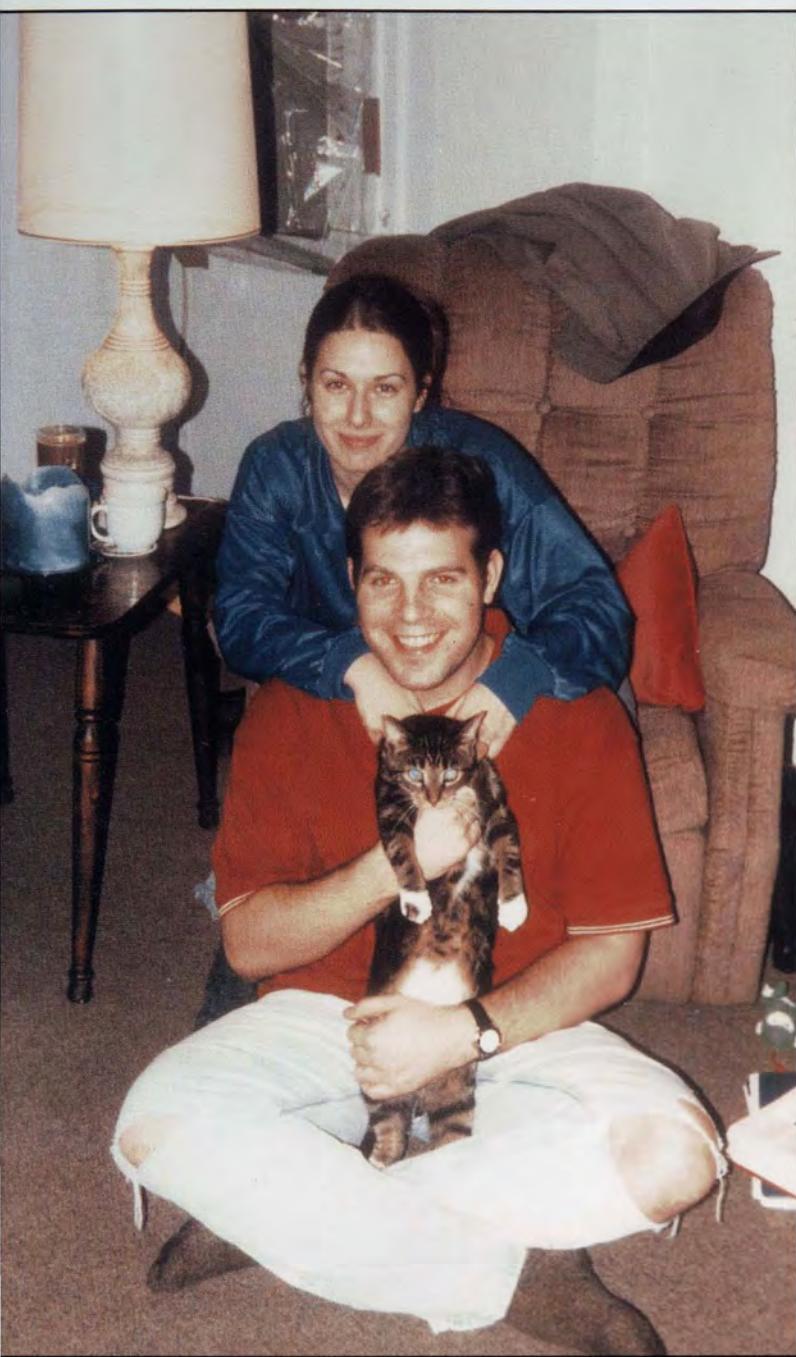

Living off-campus is still tremendous fun and a privilege. After all, it's the first big step to real independence and responsibility a kid comes across in their college years. I think others would agree there are wonderful benefits to living off-campus. You can have your own room, set your own hours, play music as loud as your neighbor can stand, and did I mention have parties?

Backpacks on Campus

What would we do without them?

Kari Sowers

When packing for college, students carefully choose what to bring and what to leave behind. Do I need all these clothes? Is it time to put the ET poster away? How many pairs of shoes can one person really use? Every student brings his or her own assortment of favorite things. There is one item, however, that almost all students will bring: a backpack.

Regardless of major, all students need something to carry their heavy, costly books. Amanda Capelle, a junior psychology major from Willard, Ohio, carries about three books, plus folders in her shoulder bookbag. Since "it's falling apart now," Capelle is planning on trading it in for a backpack. She thinks that two shoulder straps will be a great improvement over the back pain caused by all of that weight being on one shoulder.

Andrea Lawrence, a P4 from Martin's Ferry, Ohio, uses her trusty backpack of five years from L.L. Bean to hold her four enormous binders.

"I like to carry it on both shoulders unless I'm wearing my big, bulky coat," Lawrence says.

with gum, computer disks, old receipts, a flip comb, a cellular phone, and even an occasional toothbrush.

She believes that name brands do not necessarily mean quality since her $12.99 Wal-Mart backpack has already lasted over two and a half years.

"This backpack has

" Regardless of major, all students need something to carry their heavy should. Emptying t h e contents of one, I found , a m o n g o t h e r things , A d v i l , cassettes, disks, Kleenex, crayons, a stapler, a pocket knife, gum, stickers, broken pencils, candy, Tums, an umbrella, a comb with missing teeth, hand cream, hair rubberbands, and a voter ID card.

If I were to get lost in some far off wilderness, I could probably survive for at least several weeks- using the contents of that backpack. Of course, it's not as light as it could be and it has war scars. During the Holiday Spectacular two years ago, I had put the backpack on top of the lockers backstage in the Freed Center. Someone had closed their locker on my strap and thanks to the sewing on the end of the strap, I couldn't get it out. So besides a little surgery, the backpack's in great shape and will probably last longer than I do.

So, what's lurking in your backpack?

Twins on Campus

Seeing double

Kristina Cudney
Tony Bassett

Walking through McIntosh do you think you're seeing double? Maybe you are, because five sets of identical twins from five different Ohio communities started their freshman year at Northern this year.

"It's really incredible, especially when you consider the odds of it happening at a smaller school like ONU," said Jack Jeffery, Associate Director of Public Information. What are the odds exactly? Well according to Dr. Robert Hovis, chairman of the math department, the chances of that many sets of identical twins in the same class at a school this size is about 1 in 50 million.

"Usually you see twins sticking together like this," said Hovis.

"We would have gone anywhere together, no matter what college," said Jesse Cox, of he and his twin Joey Cox, both freshman mechanical engineering majors.

But why? Having a sibling can be the most rewarding and frustrating part of life a person can go through. To have someone to talk to, laugh with and yell at not only adds to the maturing process, but also ensures a friendship for a lifetime. Being a twin is all that and more.

Being a twin on a college campus has similarities to being a twin at home, but at the same time, there is a better comprehension that being a twin is something very special.

Most of the five sets of twins live together.

"College is going to be a difficult adjustment anyway... why not make that adjustment with a very familiar face?" said Jennifer Cudney, freshman environmental studies major.

Advantages to living with a twin on campus are knowing your roommate and his or her personality and not having to argue over who brings what. There is no problem borrowing clothes, toothpaste, and food, or the most important college item—cash.

But there is more to living with a twin on campus than a source of money. It's about a virtually unbreakable support system. There is always someone there to listen to your being homesick, and having a bad day, or someone to unwind with. Some people suffer "roommate blahs," but this happens less when rooming with a twin. No matter how frustrating it may be, twins have an incurable need to forgive and forget the little arguments they have.

Holiday Theater

A memorable picture in time

Ben Richards

The third annual production of the ONU Holiday Spectacular, a collection of traditional Christmas and Hanukkah songs, brightened the winter season. The show appealed to all ages and included such favorites as "Frosty the Snowman," "I'll Be Home for Christmas," "Joy to the World" and "Sabbath Prayer."

One of the crowd's favorite scenes, Toyland, brought together ballerina dolls, dancing Russian toys and tap dancing soldiers. Along with the fun of singing and dancing, the show also featured the living nativity, a serious reenactment of the events surrounding Christ's birth.

"The Holiday show provides students a unique opportunity to put together rental packages and schedule crew labor," said senior Chris Sprague, a communication arts major, referring to the set and stagehands. "It's a fun, happy show that gets to be performed in different venues."

"I was impressed at the way the company worked together to produce such an amazing show in such a short amount of time" in communication arts, is a newcomer to the show.

KICKING UP THEIR FEET, the ONU Holiday Spectacular performers brought the spirit of Christmas to ONU.

"Christmas is my favorite time of year, so it was fun to be able to spread the Christmas cheer to everyone who came to see the show," Krause said. "I was impressed at the way the company worked together to produce such an amazing show in such a short amount of time."

"I've thought the variety of song and dances was spiffy," said Jevin Calvert, sophomore mechanical engineering major.

The Holiday Spectacular is a favorite tradition at ONU.

must have a lot of paperwork with the theater season wrapping up.

Dobson: You've got that right! Production reports, budget stuff...you know we're already planning the Holiday Show for next year....

(The Writer chuckles as she wanders down the hallway, fully aware that Christmas was months away. She wanders onto the Biggs Theater stage. The 550-seat theater looks huge in its barren emptiness. She walks center stage, closes her eyes and remembers.)

The whole scene changes as she remembers it all—the sights and sounds of a show as a performer, a crew member, a member of stage management, and an audience member. She can see the hundreds of lights hung carefully above, twinkling with excitement. She can see the sound console, where the "techies" meticulously tinker with microphone frequencies. She can see stage management staff running around the technical booth, calling the show from

It all flashes before her eyes—Jesus Christ Superstar, The Holiday Spectacular, The Threepenny Opera, Singin' in the Rain...She can feel how hard the running crew concentrates as they rush to shift scenery in record time. And the scenery—it's fantastic! The shop workers have outdone themselves with the hundreds of hours they've put into creating a new "world." Everything is precise, perfectly coordinated by the director and the designers. The performers soar through lines and songs. The music explodes. The audience is on its feet with thunderous applause....

Sprague: Hey, you! What are you doing out here all alone in the dark? (The University Stage Manager chuckles as he walks towards the writer.)

Writer: Just remembering, Chris...(the Writer smiles) It's been a good year.

Sprague: Yes, my dear it has.

Writer: Hey, any rumors about next year?

Sprague: Oh, have I got stories for you! (The Writer and Chris exit stage right as the curtain closes on the scene.)

Volunteering

Helping the community

Jennifer Smishko

"Pass me that piece of siding will you?"

"Watch out for the ladder!"

These are just a few of the things that can be heard around the H.E.L.P.S. H.O.M.E.S. project in nearby Alger. H.E.L.P.S. is an organization modeled after Habitat for Humanity.

"Volunteering is more than an opportunity to help others; it helps individual growth in personality and people skills," said Jason Tucker, a junior civil engineering major and H.E.L.P.S. H.O.M.E.S. project coordinator. "This promotes teamwork and patience. You learn about yourself and at the same time build a house for someone in need."

Volunteering on campus takes many different forms, from chapel groups such as Habitat for Humanity, to the pharmacy program that requires its majors to volunteer between 20 to 30 hours of a year; but many people exceed that amount on their own.

"It's one of the best programs we've ever done," said Dr. Thomas Gossel, Dean of the College of Pharmacy. "Students say that volunteering has opened doors and their eyes to different things in the world. It instills a sense of cooperation, and independence and personal responsibility. Besides, it gets the students into real life situations."

Aside from the obvious choice of working in a pharmacy, students can work in the emergency room or go on a run in an ambulance, as did Brian Grammel, a P2.

"Over the summer I went with the EMS because I always wanted to be a fireman and this was as close as I was going to get. It was fun and exciting with my adrenaline flowing quickly."

But there is more to volunteering than an adrenaline rush. "I've been delivering food to the needy at Christmas for the past 16 years," Grammel said. "I've seen firsthand how a few people make a difference in a lot of people's lives. Without volunteer things just wouldn't get done."

Road Trips

On the road again

Kate Klotzbach

Education is more than spending time in a classroom, and students' travels prove what can be learned off-campus.

ONU's chapter of the Public Relations Student Society of America, PRSSA, took a trip to Nashville, Tennessee. Over five days, members Dan Lemin, junior, Tonya Yeagle, senior, Leanne Seigler, senior, and Nick Ritz, senior, networked with other PRSSA members, attended informative workshops, learned about different areas of public relations, and got to know future colleagues. The students also had a chance to hear CNN White House Correspondent Wolf Blitzer speak.

Seven lucky students traveled with the English Department to Stratford, Ontario, Canada for the Shakesphere Play Festival. The group was able to see the plays "Coriolanus," and "The Taming of the Shrew."

"The three-day trip was really cool—we not only experienced three top-notch plays, but tasted the Stratford night life," said Jennifer Smishko, a sophomore English major.

Some members of the group had an interesting experience at a Mexican restaurant. Instead of place mats, long sheets of brown paper covered the table and the students were given crayons to color with! Dinner had an artistic touch that evening.

Time with friends, hanging out in career sessions, and personal advice from the Weather Channel guy--what does that sound like to you? To the members of the National Broadcasting Society, NBS, it meant that they were on a road trip!

This year, NBS took America by storm, attending two regional conferences, one national conference, and touring three Ohio television stations.

The conferences offered the students a chance to make connections and contacts with big-name people in the business and to gain valuable information on the industry by observing and speaking to those people. One regional trip was made to St. Louis, Missouri.

"The professionals at the conventions are very helpful," NBS vice-president Angela Harper said. "They give you insight into what to do and not to do." She stressed that hearing real pointers and opinions from industry people themselves shed new light on the industry.

Another regional trip was made to Michigan. On the trip were NBS president Saundra Hillman, vice-president Harper, fund-raising committee chair Patrick Otte, Sara Beanblossom, adviser Becky Gainey, and WONB staff members Richard Gainey and Angie Riedel.

Haake.

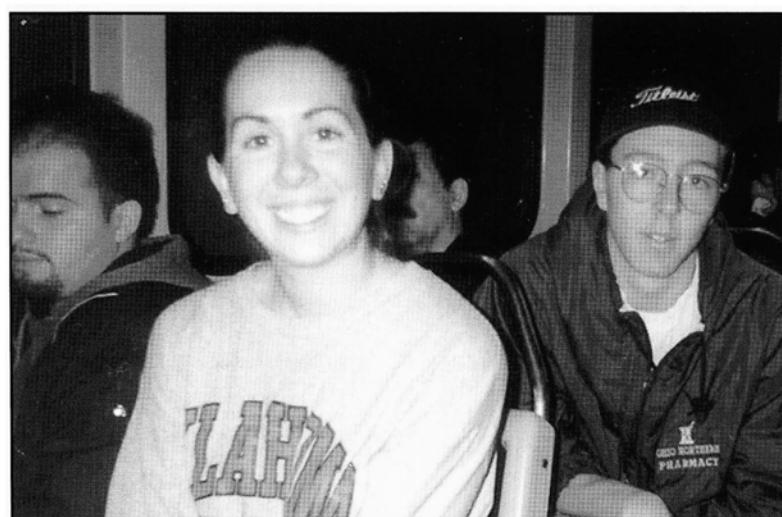

"Sara drove like a maniac! She ran every stop sign in sight on the way up and no one would let her drive after that," said Harper.

"A bunch of students in a car together driving for hours at a time... it makes for an interesting trip!" said Otte.

It wasn't all meetings and work; the group also shopped and went to a hockey game.

Several students also went to the National Convention in Nashville, Tennessee in March. This conference was important because it allowed the students to review resumes with media.

"Nashville was fun, we lived it up because it was a last hurrah for the seniors," said Harper.

Social events galore

Residence Life programming provides more than just free food and a good time. The activities allow residents to become a big family in a supportive environment. There are many important roles programming plays.

Brookhart Hall's Head Resident Saundra Hillman explains, "Residence Life activities offer the opportunity for people to interact." There are the big events like the Brookhart Mardi Gras at the end of March, and smaller events like an all-hall Christmas decorating contest. There's even a spaghetti bash cooked for the residents by their RAs and wing representatives.

Focusing on intellectual programming is another aspect of Residence Life. For instance, Hillman says, "We increased breast cancer freshman biology major and Stambaugh resident, stresses it isn't always the big events that are the most important, "I like the smaller projects because they are a break. Like making Christmas ornaments—it didn't take up too much time, and I got to know people in my hall."

Barnett realizes the significance of overall wellness. "The student as a whole is important in Residence Life programming. By having a safe community and social atmosphere the freshmen of this hall can get to know each other and themselves."

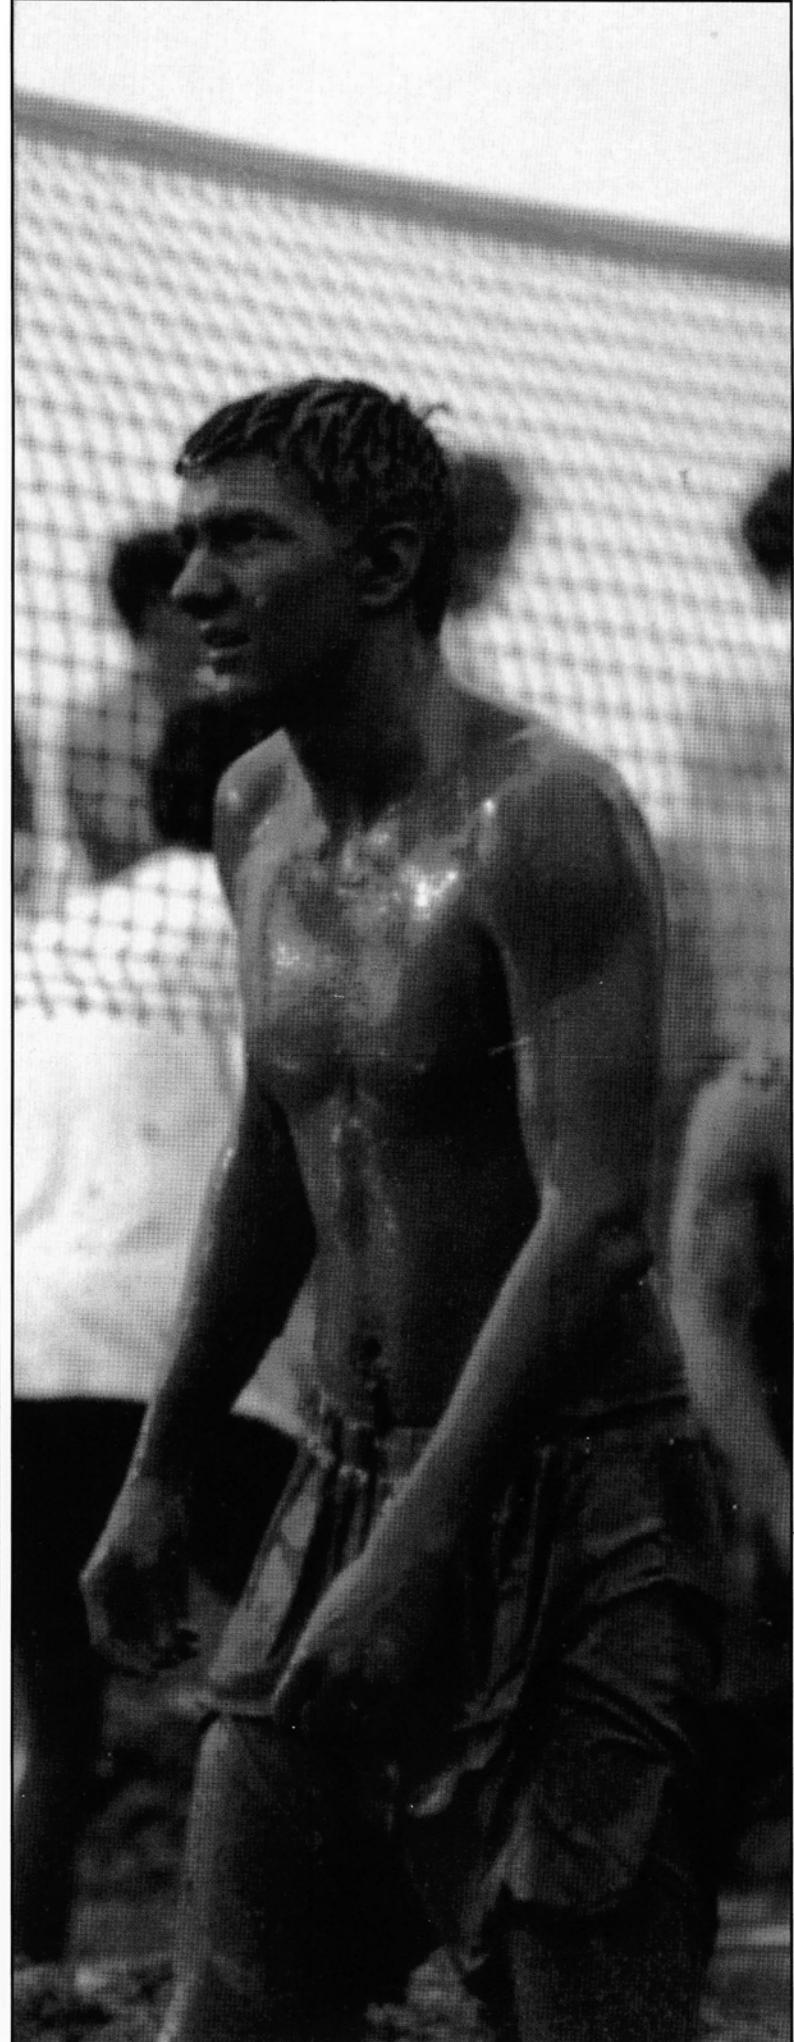

Hillman agrees, "Residence Life programming is about showing how we are all different and all the same."

Body Art

When the body is the canvas

Chris Pollock

Andy Warhol used soup cans. Christo uses umbrellas. There are all kinds of different media that can be used to express one's art. But in the '90s, one's own body is the choice of the socially avant-garde. "Body art" is the term used to refer to such things as tattoos and body piercing, often in someplace other than the familiar earlobe. These days, piercing is not nearly the strange thing it once was twenty years ago, but it is still not for everyone.

"I kept it a pretty big secret," Melissa Ryan said, a P1 with a barbell stud, (a small metal Q-tip), through her tongue. "I figured, hey, how bad could it be? But my dad said he was very disappointed in me."

"My mom wouldn't speak to me for a whole day," Kristina Perkins said, a third year psychology student, referring to her parents' reaction when she got a nose ring.

The mainstream fashionableness of tattooing is a relatively recent phenomenon, only arising in the mid '90s. Attitudes toward this particular form of self-expression vary much more widely than towards piercing, as the experience of Karmon Kirby, a third year civil engineering student, shows.

"My mom went with me [and] got one herself," Kirby said.

I f nothing else, Ohio Northern students are as willing to suffer for their art as were the artists of bygone eras. Although tattooing and body piercing are completely different forms of expression, they are both done with needles. And they both have something else in common.

DISPLAYING HIS TATTOO, Jarue Mark shows he has an "eye" for art.

Pain.

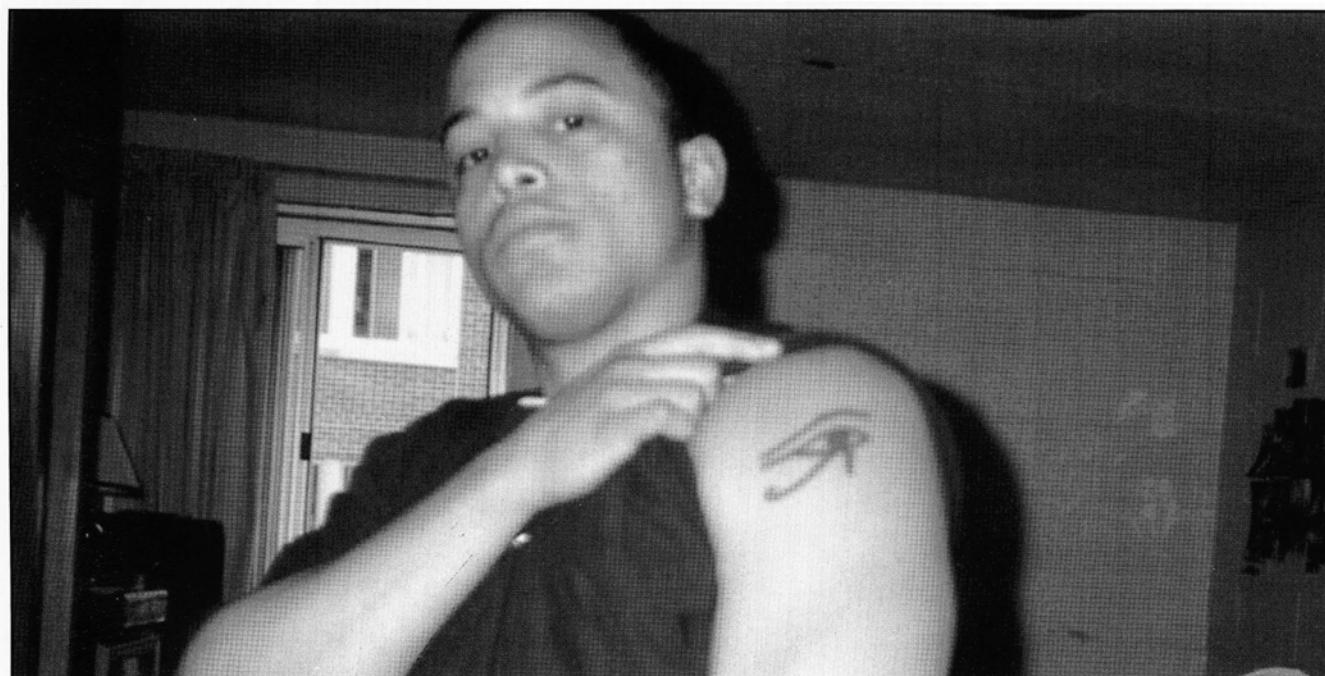

"It hurt," Kirby said. "It felt like razor blades cutting me."

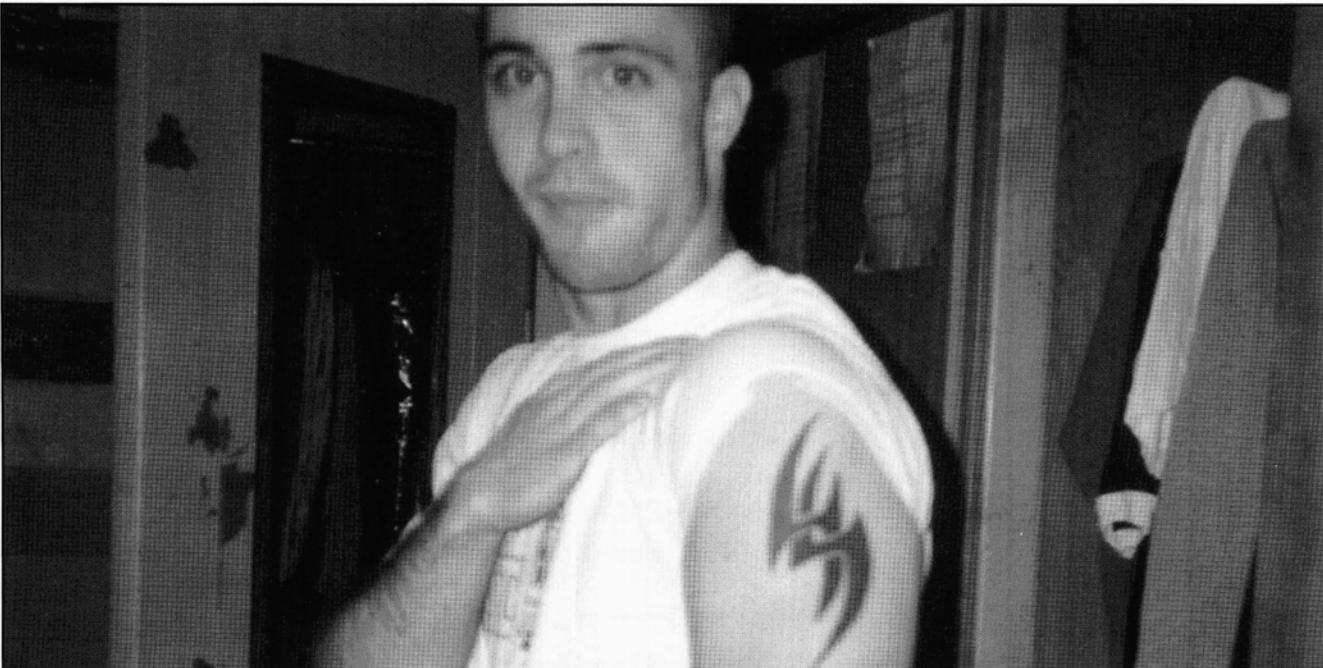

"They have this really big needle that they push through your nose very, very slowly," Perkins said of her nose ring. "It hurt a lot!"

Anyone serious about body art must consider the value of enduring such pain. Just having something to brag about would not seem worth it. The pain keeps the pierced and/or tattooed population at ONU a relatively small segment of the community. But those who choose to go under the needle for the sake of self-expression can take their place among a brave minority.

Renovations

Changes around campus

Angie Perry

Students who walked past Presser Hall or the Tilton Hall of Law may have noticed a big hole in the ground or yards of plastic orange fencing; the clouds of dust and the noise were due to this year's renovations to these buildings.

Students and professors in Presser Hall have been struggling with the lack of space for years. The limited number of practice rooms and small offices limited students' rehearsal time and individual time with professors. In past years, professors had to fit a desk and a piano in a room similar in size to those found in Maglott Hall. This left little space to move around. With the renovations, professors will have larger offices and will be located closer to areas where they spend most of their class time.

The renovations will also provide more rehearsal space for large groups and more classrooms.

This was necessary for the growing number of music majors. Dr. Denise D'Area, an associate professor of music, is looking forward to the new rehearsal space.

"It will be a big plus, along with the added classrooms, not to mention it will look nice on the outside, too!"

Dr. Rebecca Casey, an instructor in music, commended the construction crew on their good job.

"They have been really wonderful to accommodate professors and their schedules," Casey said.

Although the dust was a bother and the noise could be irritating, in the end, it will definitely be worth it!

extended computer access in the library. The additions to the offices will create a wing that puts the faculty together in one area

"This will make it convenient and easy for the students to get to the offices," Shane Edington, L2, said. "The new lounges for the students will be nice, too," referring to the formal and casual lounges that are being built.

The Tilton Hall of Law will also be greatly benefiting from its renovations. Karen Cooper, Assistant to the Dean for Administrative Services, was a member of one of the renovation committees. She explained that there will be numerous benefits like an addition to the growing library, additions to the faculty offices, a new trial courtroom and Even though there has been an excess of dust and some students were forced to wear earplugs for finals, the benefits will outweigh the inconveniences in the end.

On the other side of campus, the Meyer Hall of Science and the Biggs Engineering Building were connected by a new wing, and the freshman residence hall Maglott was also renovated.

PROVIDING BETTER SECURITY, the doors to many of the residence halls were replaced this year.

Tunes on the Tundra

The 15th anniversary

Jenny Wakely

Once again Student Senate provided a day full of music, activities and fun for students. The 15th anniversary of Times of the Tundra, a day-long concert with the theme PHAT 15th, was held in the field house because of rain. Despite the weather, Tunes was a success.

Seven bands performed country, rock and reggae during the concert.

When asked what he thought of the bands, Jon Cox, a freshman music education major, replied, "I thought Anti-Man did a great job getting the crowd involved during the show. They were very good."

Along with the music, Student Senate and a Kappa Phi sponsored hair-wrap booth. Students were also able to take home molds of their hands from the waxed hand demonstration.

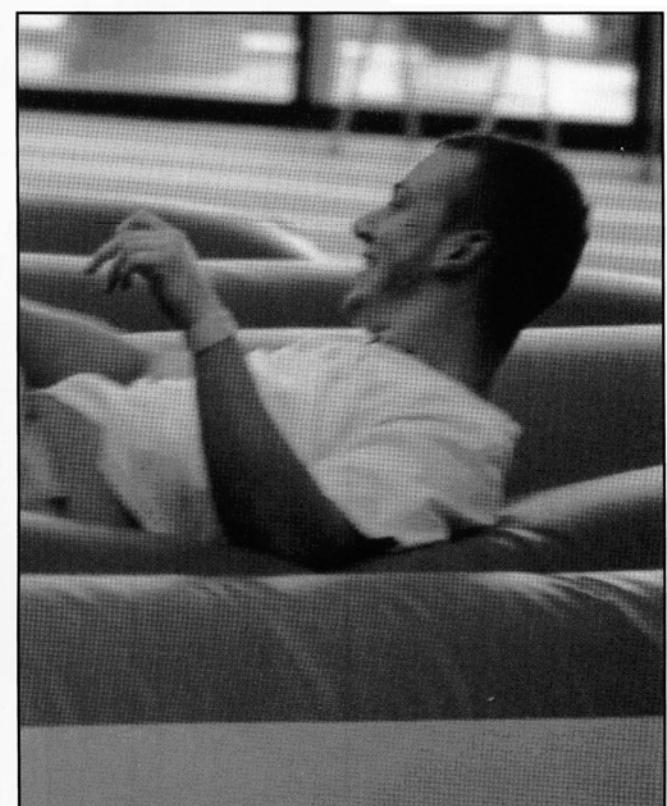

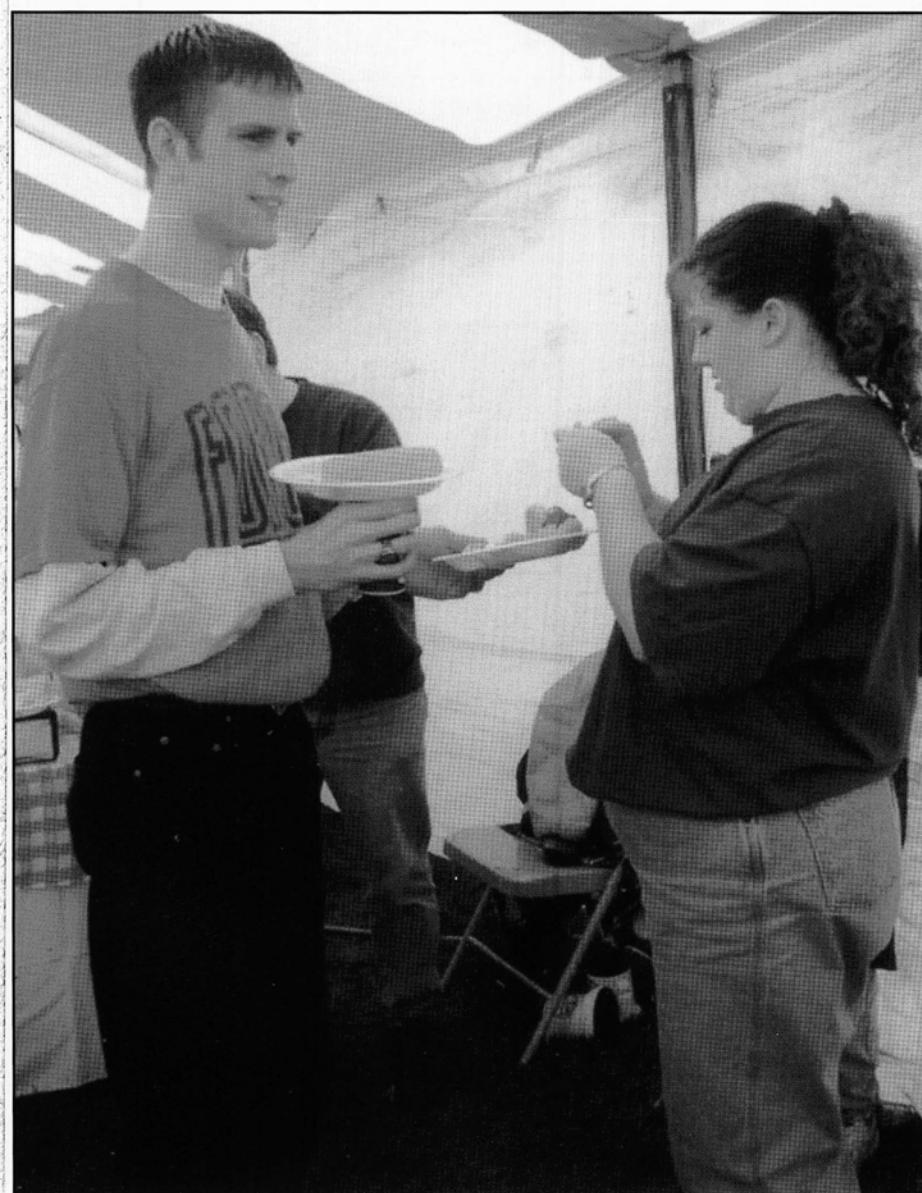

"I really enjoyed the variety of activities, especially waxing my hands," said sophomore music major Melanie Evans.

Honors Day

Being recognized

Chris Pollock

Honors Day, a tradition stretching back over thirty years, is an event to recognize students who have excelled in their studies. The day includes special award ceremonies, a convocation presenting the different honoraries and a luncheon for students and their parents.

David Mortimer, a senior political science major, commented, "I think it's really neat that Ohio Northern does something like that for the students, and I thought the speakers were excellent."

Dr. Lee Snyder, President of Bluffton College, addressed the honorees during the convocation ceremonies. She emphasized the role that superior students will be expected to hold in today's fast-paced society.

"You will be vested with the trust and responsibility of giving leadership to the next generation as we cross into the wild frontier," said Snyder.

A compliment to Dr.

Snyder's speech was an address given by Lori Boughton, a senior biology major who

"It's great to see that so many students have achieved high standards and are recognized for them!"

~Aaron Carns

an Academic All-American by USA Today. Boughton focused on attention to detail and its role in success.

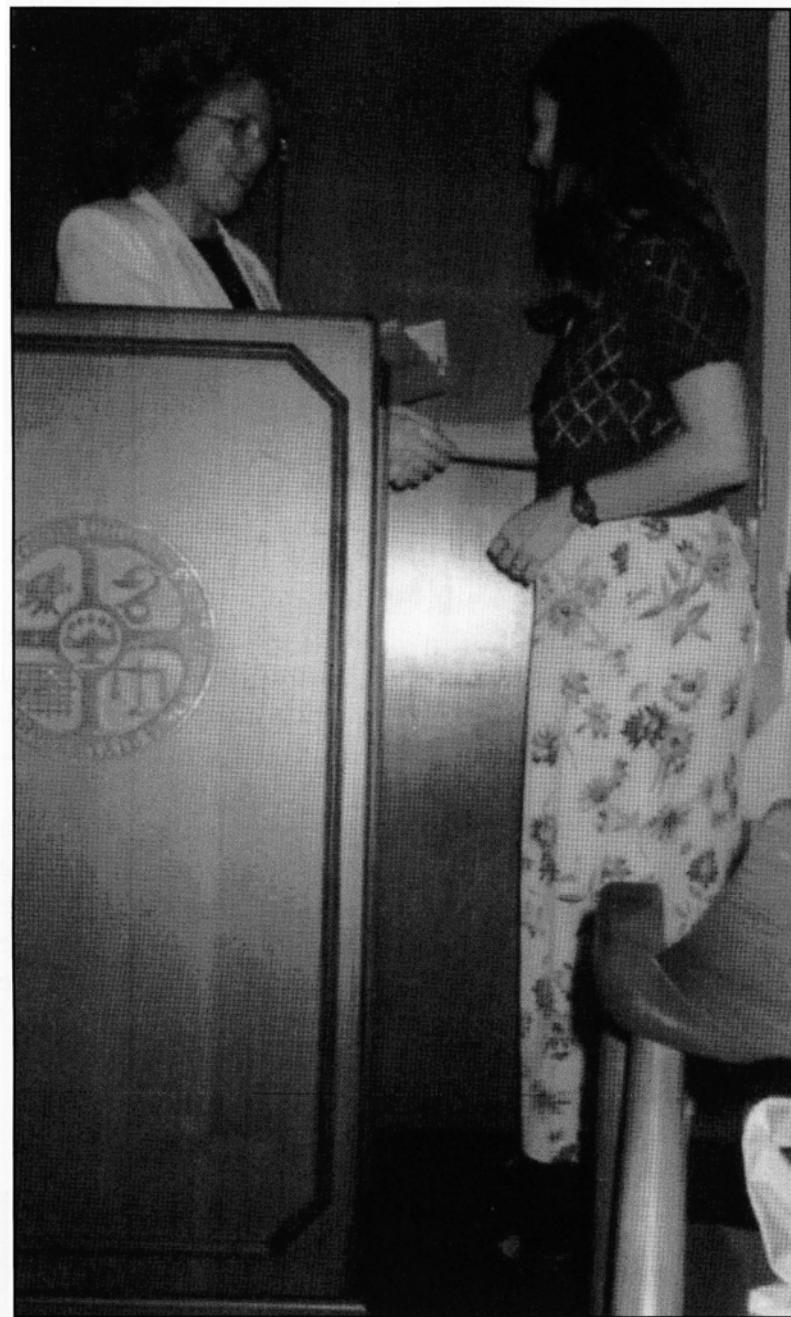

"I believe it's an accumulation of the little things in our life that enrich our character," she said.

Ohio Northern is fortunate to have so many accomplished students to make Honors Day important. Being a student is a tough assignment. Being a superior student, tougher still.

Aaron Carns, a sophomore civil engineering major, echoes these sentiments, "It's great to see that so many students have achieved high standards and are recognized for them."

Commencement

Ending and beginning

Carrie Kashawlic

Listening to the words, but not really understanding them, I sat through graduation rehearsal in a daze. I was actually graduating! I knew it had to happen at some point, but it seems only yesterday that I was standing in the snow outside Maglott at 3:00 a.m. waiting for security to turn off the *#!@ fire alarm. Now, in my own apartment, I sometimes wish to be back in Maglott with all my friends just down the hall—and only a few dishes to wash. Finishing rehearsal I found my friend Tonya Yeagle and we headed back home. Somehow neither of us could actually believe we were done with college! Tonya said it best, "I don't think I'll fully realize that I've graduated until the fall; everyone goes back to school in the fall and I won't—then it'll hit me."

Sunday, May 24, 1998, the big day, I left my parents at Hardees waiting for my aunt with a warning not to wait too long because seating is limited. I headed to the sports center smiling with anticipation. Walking in and seeing my friends' faces, which were strange to me four years ago, my smile got wider. Snapping my gown and putting the mortarboard on my head, I smiled for a camera. Quickly, I unsnapped the gown (it's very hot in 80 degree weather with over 4,000 people in one building!), but I just had to snap it up again for another picture. Between photos I talked with friends one last time waiting for the ceremony to begin. Many had jobs lined up and were shopping for furniture, others were headed to graduate school, and still others were headed home to find a job and not have to pay rent.

Slowly, the faculty began the processional and my stomach flipped. This was it.

In less than two hours I would be an alumna of Ohio Northern University; soon I, too, would get the alumnus magazine and reflect on my college days. Stories of Founders Hall being all men were left to my class and those older than us—stories to tell to younger students about how it was when we went to ONU.

Taking our seats, the ceremony began. After each college was announced and the graduates threw candy, Ping-Pong balls, paper air planes, silly string, and confetti, we got in line to receive our diplomas. Waiting at the edge of the stage for my name to be called I thought, "This is it! This is really it! I just hope that my diploma is actually in the case." Smiling widely, I shook hands with President Freed and exited the stage; glad I didn't fall on my face. Sitting in my seat, I hurriedly opened the diploma case. The diploma was there—no letter from the Controller saying I owed money. I held my diploma staring at my name as if I had never seen it in print before, and I began to feel emotions that I can't begin to describe.

Commencement, something I looked forward to; since the day I stepped foot on campus during freshmen orientation, was actually over. I graduated. Smiling, with tears in the corner of my eyes, not knowing if I was happy or sad, I was proud to sit among the graduates of 1998.

The Survey Says...

Thanks to everyone who took the time to fill out the yearbook surveys. Two surveys were sent out this year; the first was about the goals each person set for the year. This survey was sent out at the beginning of the year, then again at the end of the year to see if you accomplished your goals. Selections of this survey you will find in the pages to come.

The second survey asked opinion and daily routine questions. We had 462 responses, which is approximately 16 percent of the undergraduate and graduate student body. The results of the survey are throughout the academic section.

We hope you enjoy the survey today and in years to come.

Sincerely,

Jason Bowser

I had a cold and my girlfriend made me laugh and I snot rocketed onto her lap. She was nice though; she did not even complain or say how gross. She asked for a tissue and wiped it off and we

Owen Smith

During a Trip 420 show, I was jumping up and down while I was playing and my baggy pants fell down past my butt. I had to stand still until the end of the song.

Sharon Trout

My freshman year there was a big snow storm. I was late for class, from Meyer Hall to Young, and I cut through the grass walking as fast as I possibly could. I had my head down and my hands in my pockets. I was closing in on Young fast, seeking the shelter and the dry warm blast of air when I promptly ran into the tree just outside the door. Branches got caught in my hair, scratched my face, raked my lip, and nearly tore my coat as I flew backward and landed on my derriere, sprawled out flat in the snow. I'm not too sure exactly how many people witnessed this artless event, and I don't really care to ever find out. The only thing that is important to me is that the scar on my lip is finally gone.

Jenn Smishko

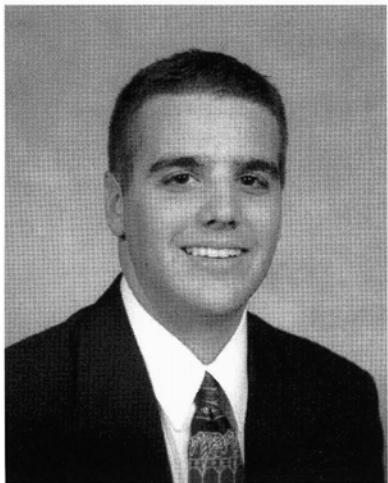

I fell asleep in class, and after class the professor asked, "Could you please try to stay awake in class next time?"

To realize my parents are very wise and I

Did you accomplish your

My parents, well, being here in the “real world” I’ve realized that yes, my parents are very smart people. Yet it is a learning process, one that I may never fully achieve.

A goal I would like to accomplish is to go one day without checking my e-mail.

*What goal have you set for this academic year,
Kate Klotzbach?*

I'm off campus and not on the meal plan, so I'd like to learn as many ways as possible to prepare and eat rice dishes. Real food, like beef, is too expensive for a limited budget.

Did you accomplish your goal?

Yes! I have indeed discovered many new and fascinating ways to prepare and eat rice.

1. Plain
2. Uncooked (for those oh-so-crunchy days)
3. Mixed with salsa
4. Mixed with Stove Top Stuffing
5. Mixed with Stove Top Stuffing and Soy Sauce
6. Mixed with the last 1/3 cup of noodles you have left
7. Mixed with meat and spaghetti sauce
8. Mixed with spaghetti sauce
9. On top of tortilla chips with taco sauce
10. Added to canned/boxed soup mixes to make the portions bigger/last longer

And there are many more, but these are the highlights.

Lori Boughton Named All-USA Scholar

Jack Jeffery

Lori Boughton's excellence in academics, leadership skills and service to others have earned her national acclaim. Boughton, a senior biology major from Lexington, has been named to the All-USA Academic Team by "USA Today" newspaper.

Boughton, a third-team All-Academic honoree, is one of the top 60 students of 1,200 nominees from colleges and universities nationwide.

"I'm very honored to receive this recognition. I never expected it," she said.

Boughton earned A's for all of her high school and college classes. She is studying for a career in medicine and received early admission last fall to the Ohio State University School of Medicine and Public Health.

She said, "I want to be in a position to help others. One of my most rewarding experiences at ONU has been as a member of the residence life staff. As a resident hall assistant, I've enjoyed helping others, especially freshmen who are adjusting to college. I've tried to go out of my way to involve students who are otherwise shy and reluctant to try new experiences."

Boughton has received several academic honors. She has been named the outstanding biology student in her class for three straight years. She has received the Sophia Felker Award for Outstanding Junior in Math, Computer and Natural Sciences; Mary Jane and E. Meredith Schwartz Biology Scholarship and JoAnne J. Trow Award for outstanding Alpha Lambda Delta member. Boughton is also a member of Mortar Board, a senior honorary for scholarship, leadership and service.

She has done extensive research related to HIV under Dr. Rodney Anderson's supervision. She presented the results of her research at the regional and national conferences of Beta Beta Beta biology honorary.

Dr. Anderson said, "Lori is an excellent role model. Although brilliant, hard working and confident, she is unassuming and unpretentious. She relates to research scientists and kindergarten students. Some students on the fast track to an accomplished career are very vocal about their accomplishments, but Lori is not one. She has confidently made a difference in the organizations and projects she has been part of and demonstrated by actions that she has the ability, character and discipline to be the best."

Unusual Classes: A Peek into the Peculiar

Chris Pollock

Every now and then, ONU students are thrown a curve ball in their education. Just when the classes have slipped into a monotonous routine, along comes one that can be so atypical or downright bizarre that it can become the basis for a lifetime's worth of unusual anecdotes.

Pharmacy students alone may have the experience of the "Drugs of Abuse" class. This course studies major drug abuse issues and emphasizes their pharmacological effects.

"It was different," Ryan Hogue, P5, said. "All those drugs you've heard were bad for you your whole life—you finally understand why!"

Another unusual class is "Human Sexual Behavior." While taught by the Department of Psychology, this class is open to any student. Not surprisingly, it is quite popular and often fills very quickly. Students in this class discuss such varied but related topics as pornography, abortion, sexually transmitted diseases, and common sexual morals and attitudes. "I took it because everyone said it was a fun class to take," Katie Greenlee, a Pharm D, said. "We had some good debates going."

In the engineering college, only the civil engineering students may feel the euphoria associated with the "Solid and Hazardous Waste Management" class.

"We studied garbage and toxic waste," Mike Taylor, senior civil engineering major, said, "And how to find the most efficient garbage truck route." Along with these rapture-inspiring topics, the course catalog lists "the conceptual design of disposal facilities" as another topic in the course.

When studying classes like these, it is best to keep an open mind and never lose a sense of humor—but always pay attention; like other classes, they can be fun or boring, but the grades assigned are all worth the same.

Briefly Describe the Perfect Professor

Aaron Eberhart

Combine the thoroughness of Dr. Harold Putt, the ease of Dr. Karen Keppler Albert, and the personality of Professor Jack Bucco.

Andrea Funderburg

Someone who sincerely wants you to learn and grades on what you've accomplished and how you've improved, in addition to regular grading. He/she would also genuinely care about the students' lives.

Andrew Farnham

Interesting, talks in English clearly. Punctual and friendly.

Blythe Phillis

One who is understanding of your out-of-the-classroom problems and always finds time to answer and help you with any questions that you may have.

Jack Strahm

He has a beard; he wears a tie with psychedelic bands on it. He is head of the physics department. He has weasels and brews his own beer.

Brienne Manz

Gotta be interesting, doesn't mind giving out A's, and it wouldn't hurt if he looked like Brad Pitt.

Becky Shotwell

One that understands that I have more than just his/her class.

Carrie Tonkovich

Quizzes and tests straight from his notes, gives notes on overhead where everyone can see it. Offers extra opportunities. Is nice, funny (I mean funny, not where everyone laughs to get on his good side) and understands that we have classes other than his.

Dan Hemmelgarn

Grades easy, but you still learn something and he doesn't assign any long homework assignments.

Elcin Riza

The prefect professor is funny, won't put me to sleep, and cares if I understand the material. I like those who do not continue with class until everyone knows what is going on.

Dwayne Fox

Someone who is dedicated to his/her profession and spends hours outside of his/her scheduled hours to make sure class will be fast, neat, and organized the next day. They must also reserve some time for a little bit of entertainment relating to the course (i.e. Not straight lectures but not stand-up either).

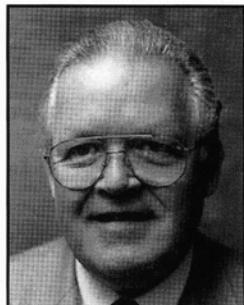

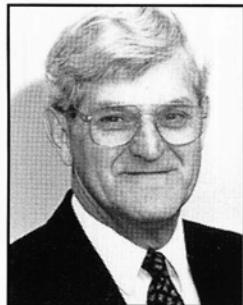

Andrea Gravitt

One who keeps your attention in class with interesting material and experiences from the real world. They are willing to help you outside of class in academic as well as personal matters. They become a friend and person you can turn to throughout your college career and thereafter.

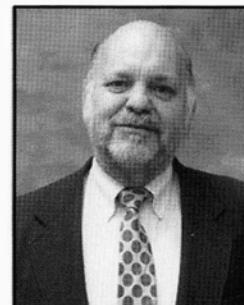

Jenna Doty

Clever and witty, sharp sense of humor and an abundance of knowledge. One that doesn't waste class time but doesn't rush through material too quickly.

Greek Week

Standing out together

Stephanie Jackson

Proving again that the ONU fraternities and sororities are a united community, Greeks gathered for their annual week of friendly competition, education and service--Greek Week 1998, Greeks Stand Out, But They Never Stand Alone.

The beginning of Greek Week opened with Greek Sing. Each fraternity and sorority were given five minutes to perform a song. The music selections ranged from 70s and 80s to country and rap. The words from songs such as "Wannabe," by the Spice Girls, and "Summer Lovin'," from the movie "Grease," were changed so that they related to Greeks at Ohio Northern.

Each day Greeks collected money during the lunch and dinner hours for Angela, a Make-A-Wish child and Ada resident. Angela's wish was to be able to travel to Hawaii. The Greek community raised over $1500 to make her dream come true.

"The speaker on sexual assault provided a nice mix of interactive discussion,"
—Amanda Rybarczyk

The week also included an educational speaker on sexual assault, a Greek chapel day, dodgeball, and water games.

Amanda Rybarczyk, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, commented, "The speaker provided a nice mix of interactive discussion."

The last day of the competitions began at noon on Saturday as everyone assembled at Fraternity Circle for the Greek Olympics. Events for the day included tug-of-war, pyramid building, bubble-gum races, izzy dizzy slip-n-slide, fire brigade, and canoe racing.

"I was glad that it was sunny because I was my sorority's slip-n-slide participant," said Brooke Franks, a member of KAΘ.

A Greek Awards Banquet was held to conclude the week's activities. Angela Ryan, AZ, and Stephen Miller, ΔΣΦ, were announced the winners of the Aphrodite and Zeus competition. Kappa Alpha Theta and Delta Sigma Phi were the overall winners of the week.

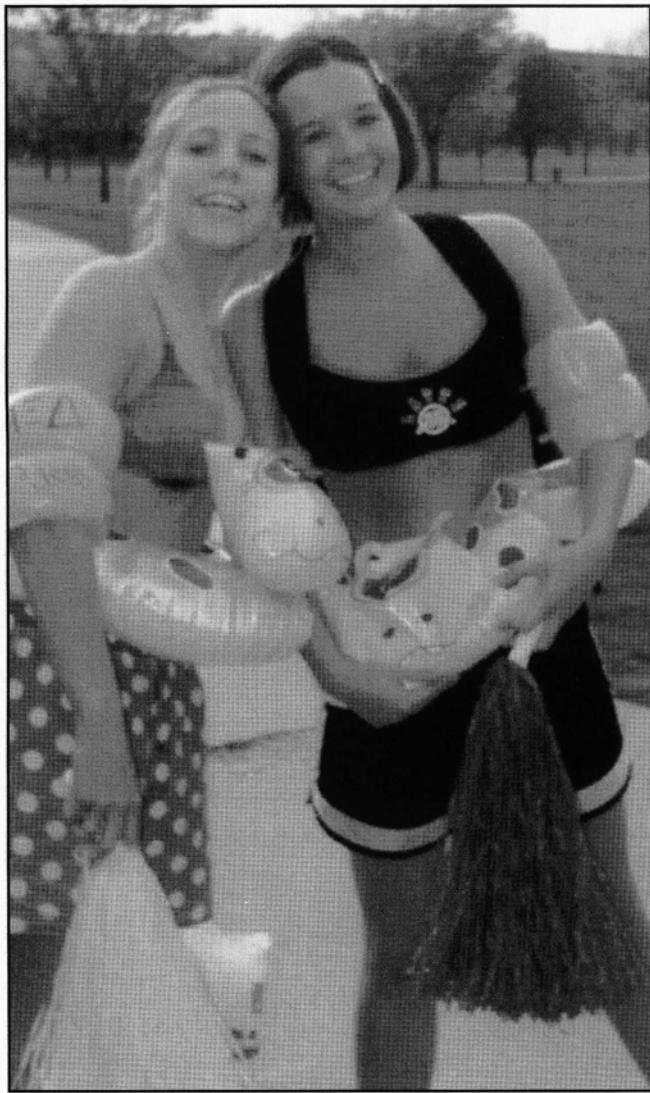

STRAIGHT TO THE TOP, the brothers of Phi Kappa Theta jump into pyramid position to score points during Greek Week.

The women's volleyball team ended a spectacular season by winning their fourth consecutive OAC regular season and tournament titles, and by reaching the quarter finals of the NCAA Division III Tournament for the second straight year.

Under the guidance of coach Kate Witte, the 12th ranked Polar Bears posted their 21st consecutive 20-win season with a 28-6 overall mark and went 9-0 in the OAC for the third time in the last four years.

Roof set an ONU all-time career record with 4,153 assists in her four years as a Polar Bear.

When asked about her personal thoughts Roof said, "For my senior year, I can honestly say that it was a fun year and my most memorable. I have great memories that I will NEVER forget, along with the most unforgettable friendships."

Senior middle hitter Cari Treisch was named

Second Team All-American and broke the school career mark with 162 solo blocks. Treisch was also voted the OAC Player of the Year.

"We had a really strong team—not too many teams can win the conference title and the tournament title four years in a row," said Treisch.

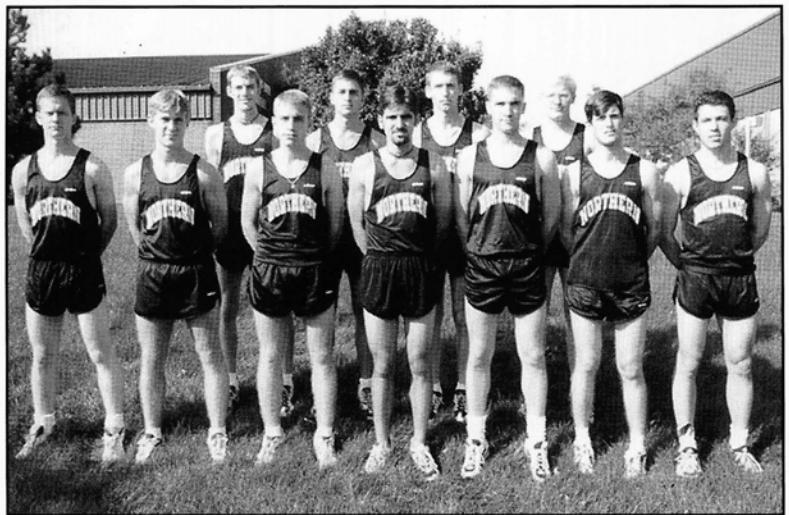

Both women received All-Conference and All-Great Lakes Region notice, and senior Mary Beth Thompson was a repeat First Team All-OAC selection.

In all, five ONU players earned All-OAC honors and Witte was named the OAC and Great Lakes Region Coach of the Year.

The women's soccer team tore up the field this season, breaking three team records.

The team had 13 shutouts, scored 104 goals, and won 17 games this season.

Coach Jeffrey Coleman said, "Our goalie saw fewer shots than any other goalie in the conference."

The team was led by senior starters: Erin Hipp, defender; Becky Heaston, midfielder; Tara Kingsley, honored players included: Hipp, fourth year OAC offensive player of the year, first team All Conference; Heaston, second team All Conference; Lori Wickstrom, first team All Conference; Cindy Back, second team All Conference; and Tami Harter, an honorable mention.

"This year has been the best year yet; we've (the team) come a long way since my freshman year, not only because of the talent, but also because of the personalities that each class brings in making our soccer family bond stronger," said Kingsley.

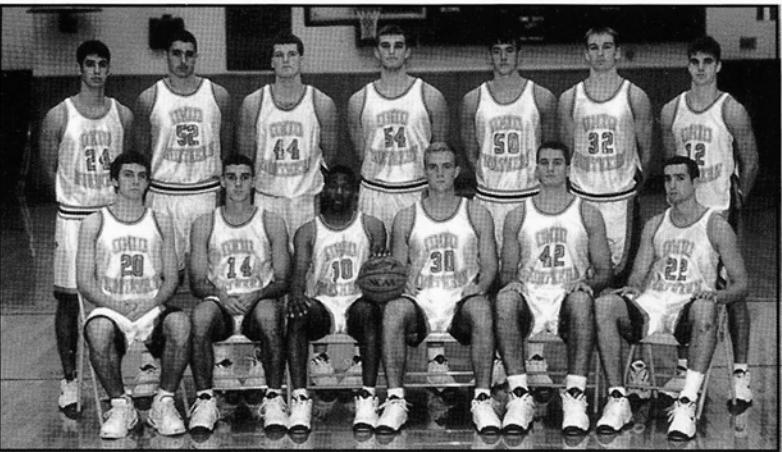

The team used an offensive 4-4-2 alignment to focus on ball control.

The team finished their great season 17-5 with six players being honored. The team carried a competitive spirit to each game and worked together to win. "Beating Wilmington was a highlight because they were competitive; we did very well this season, we worked together," said Back.

The Ohio Northern swim teams began their 1998 season on a great note. Sophomore Lisa Biery commented on an early goal, "We wanted to go out and do our best as a team." And this is exactly what the teams did.

The women's team ended with a season record of 16-19 overall and a 2-8 record in duel meets. The men's team ended with a 9-16 record overall and a 3-6 record in their duel meets. Both teams placed fourth in the Ohio Athletic Conference, OAC, league championship. The team was led this year by coach Volker "Rock" Snow and four team captains: Steve Roach, Michael Cox, Mary Riley, and Sharon Trout.

Toby Hertenstein, a junior elementary education major, also wanted to do his best this season. Improving on his success from last year, Hertenstein placed 11th in the 1-meter diving competition with 370.50 points, and 18th in the 3-meter dive with 336.95 points at the NCAA Division III championships.

A banquet was held on March 29th in honor of the team. Most Valuable Member awards were given to Hertenstein and Betsy Walters. First year through fourth year member awards were also presented.

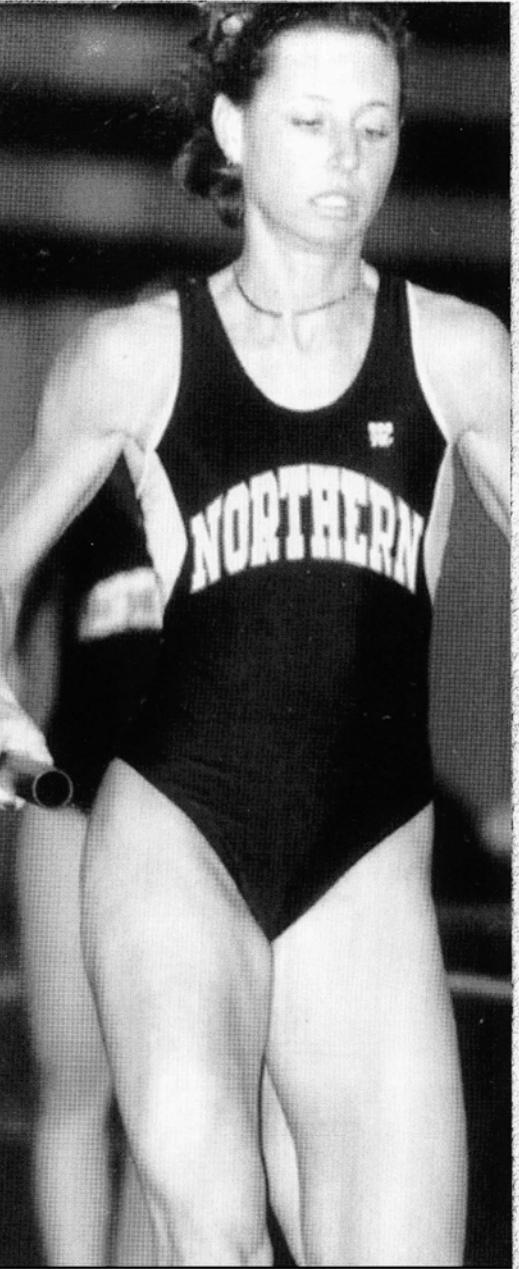

Walters, a third year pharmacy major, sums up the season best, "Our hard work really paid off and the teams surprised some people by doing so well at conference."

The ONU baseball team fought their way through a tough season. The Bears ended their season with a record of 16-15 and 10-8 in the Ohio Athletic Conference, OAC.

With the seniors and honored athletes, the team learned a lot on the field. Seniors Dave Billiter, second baseman, and Chad Downing, outfielder, taught the new freshmen the ropes. Those earning honors included: junior third baseman, Roy Henson; junior first baseman, Scott Crates; and sophomore outfielder, Chad Ebling. Sophomore pitcher Brian Rice earned an honorable mention.

The season began slowly for the Bears with a record of 3-6. The win over rival Marietta helped boost the team's pride.

"Beating Marietta was the highlight of the season because they're always number one in the league," said Downing.

Already excited for next year, the team is setting goals for a new season.

"It's an honor and a privilege to work with these young men. The team enjoys spending time together both on and off the field, and sometimes that's hard to find," said Head Coach Herb Strayer.

It's not always glamorous being a cheerleader.

The intrepid men and women of ONU's squad have to deal with everything from dangerous stunts and fierce weather to crowd indifference and the risk of embarrassment if something goes wrong.

"Practice for Dad's Day went perfectly, but in front of the crowd the girl in front fell down and knocked everyone else behind her down. It was so embarrassing!" said Kathryn Henderson, a junior electrical engineer.

A favorite stunt for both the crowd and the cheerleaders is the "basket toss," which involves throwing one of the cheerleaders high into the air. According to Robyn Kisner, P1, this stunt is not all fun and games for some, though.

"I don't go very high, but some of the other girls do, and they get scared," she said.

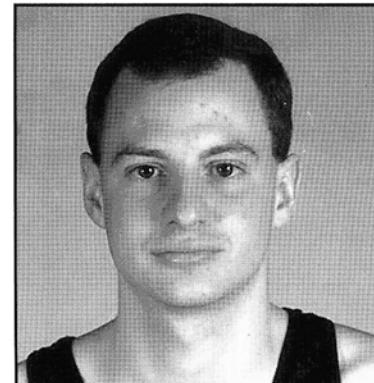

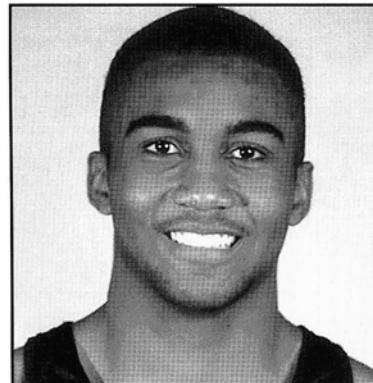

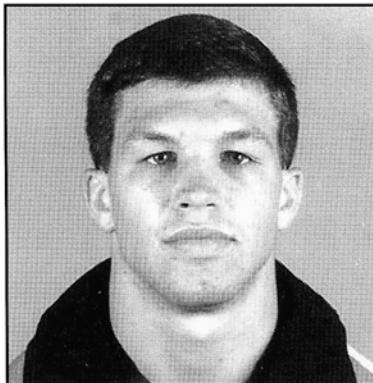

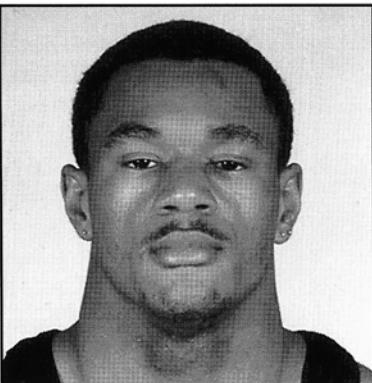

Another peril during football season for the dauntless Northern squad is the weather. Temperatures at some of the games late in the season dropped into the teens.

"You just have to laugh at it," said Nancy Klepec, P3, about the cold. Klepec also nicely summed up why cheerleaders endure such hardships.

"I got to know a lot of people through cheerleading, and I made a lot of close friends. It's been a great year and a lot of fun."

Reflections

What a year! From beauty queens to a fire in McIntosh Center, the year has definitely been exciting! As we look back on the year, there is much to reflect on--new friends, professors you've loved and hated, classes you "forgot" to attend, and parties you wish you never attended. The events of the year kept the new freshmen as well as the graduating seniors busy. From the football games, residence hall living, campus events! impossible exams, to innumerable meetings. reflecting on the 1997-1998 academic year binds us all together and makes us smile. The year's over and we are all breathing a sigh of relief—but even as we settle into our summer routines our reflections and memories of Ohio Northern will never be far from our thoughts.

United States Secretary of State, Madeline K. Albright, was the highest ranked woman in the history of the U.S. government--she was admired and respected by diplomatic corps. Previously she served as President Clinton's ambassador to the United Nations; she was a foreign policy advisor for former President Jimmy Carter.

Fiona Apple spent over a year on Billbaord's bestselling chart for her album "Tidal." Apple cut a demo tape while in Los Angeles. Back home, New York, the demo fell into the hands of a friend who baby-sat for a music industry executive. The executive played it for producer Andrew Slater.

Yasser Arafat was chairman of the PLO and president of the Palestinian National Authority. His 1993 handshake of peace with Yitzhak Rabin promised recognition between the Palestinians and the state of Israel. Arafat, 68, was a leader in promoting Middle Eastern peace.

Garth Brooks performed in New York City's Central Park for hundreds of thousands of fans. His entrance into country music wasn't easy; he failed at his first attempt after his graduation from Oklahoma State University. Ten years ago Brooks was discovered at a talent show case.

President Bill Clinton was the first Democratic president in 60 years to be re-elected. Under him, the U.S. enjoyed the lowest rate of inflation since the 1960s. He was the first president in 17 years to submit a balanced budget, but he faced scrutiny for campaign finance violations after re-election.

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton turned 50 on October 26, 1997. Clinton took a leading role in health care reform during her husband's first term as President. Now, after nearly two years in the wing, she was quietly returning to center stage to begin a program on child care.

Sheryl Crow's album "Sheryl Crow" spent over a year on the charts. At age six, Crow discovered she could play the piano by ear. Her musical talent combined with a fascination of the music of artists like the Rolling Stones and Billie Holiday led Crow to pursue her music full time.

The world bid farewell to Princess Diana; her death in a Paris car crash prompted an outpouring of grief. The crowd in the city during her funeral at Westminster Abbey was unmatched since World War II. More than a million bouquets of flowers were stacked outside the palace.

Shawn Colvin, folk-pop song writer who writes about matters of the head and heart, debuted over 10 years ago and won a Grammy with "Steady On." Her new single "Sunny Came Home" is a hit, and her latest album, "A Few Small Repairs," stayed on the charts for over a year.

Paula Cole's top selling album, "This Fire," overflows with her personal emotions and autobiographical details. A critic said "'This Fire' is filled with bold writing and singing that is gentle and whispering at one extreme of the pendulum--and vicious at the other end.

The Dave Matthews Band has demonstrated that it has staying power on the record charts. Dave Matthews, born in Johannesburg, South Africa, formed the group in 1990, and intended to come up with a "proper" name for the band, but the name stuck before they could change it.

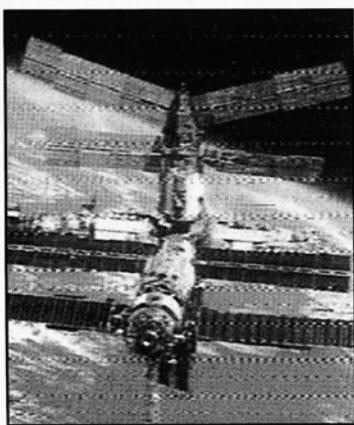

Jewel, 23, released her first album in 1995, "Pieces of You." The hit album spent over a year on the top charts. Raised in Homer, Alaska, Jewel began performing at age five and studied at the Interlochen Fine Arts Academy in Michigan. She keeps ties to Alaska--she carries dirt from home on travels.

Tim McGraw, whose last two albums, "Not a Moment Too Soon," and "All I Want" sold a combined seven million copies, built his career on a heartbreak ballad. But his fourth album, "Everywhere," reflects the changes in his life such as marriage to Faith Hill and a new daughter.

Mir space station was launched in 1986 and has been worked on almost continuously since then. It has made over 60,000 trips around Earth. The U.S. and Russia are conducting joint missions aboard the station, whose main module has been orbiting for 12 years, seven years longer than planned.

A volcano erupted in September on the Caribbean island of Montserrat, home to 11,000 people. The volcano belched ash and small rocks forcing more than two-thirds of the inhabitants to evacuate the island. The volcano on the British procreate island became active about two years ago.

Mother Teresa, 87, died on September 5, 1997 in her Calcutta convent due to heart failure. In 1948 she founded an order of Roman Catholic nuns in India called the Missionaries of Charity. Her devotion to helping others earned her many honors including the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize.

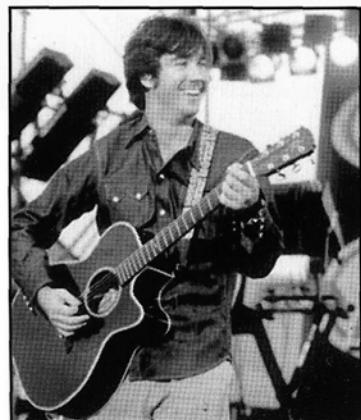

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, 48, rejected a bargain with the Palestinians, which was the backbone of the Oslo peace accords. Because of his hard-line stance, terrorists took to Israel. During 1997 two suicide bombings in Jerusalem caused him to halt peace proceedings indefinitely.

Duncan Shiek's debut album "Duncan Shiek," mixes the songs he wrote with a strong voice and his acoustic guitar. Shiek amassed a wide variety of musical experience even before reaching high school by playing classical and jazz music at summer music camps.

Phish, a music group with guitarists Trey Anastasio III and Jeff Holdsworth, had the ice cream men, Ben & Jerry, honor the group with its own flavor, Phish Food. Phish Food is a combination of milk-chocolate ice cream, caramel, marshmallow swirls and fish-shaped chocolate chips.
